Coverings Etc To Unveil Green-Friendly Bio Glass

Material will Serve as Latest Addition to Company's ECOVERINGS Line

Miami, FL – Coverings Etc will release its newest material, Bio Glass, beginning in February 2007, to its nationwide consumers. The company, who is invested in an ongoing effort to research and source green market products from across the globe, has been a member of the U.S. Green Building Council since 2001.

Coverings Etc plans to rollout the line during the first quarter of 2007 offering Bio Glass slabs in white and light green. The company will then add more colors to it's portfolio throughout the year and will also offer floor tiles in addition to slabs. Bio Glass is made from one hundred percent recycled material and is a progressive offering in the green technologies industry. The textured glass slabs are exclusively manufactured for Coverings Etc.

“The material can be used for counter or worktops, interior flooring, walls or other decorative purposes,” noted Sonja Bogensperger with Coverings Etc. “It's an avant-garde product that caters to buyers who value bio-architecture. We foresee builders, interior designers and trendsetters incorporating this striking glass material into various modern spaces.”

Bio Glass has a multidimensional appearance and its coloring varies with direct and indirect light. The white glass is made of one hundred percent post industrial recycled content while the light green is a blend of seventy percent post industrial and thirty percent post consumer recycled content. Other color options that may be released include dark green, brown and blue. These will be made from one hundred percent post consumer recycled glass.

The material is offered in polished, honed and natural finishes. Additionally, being fully vitrified, Bio Glass has a closed surface, which makes it easy to care for using traditional cleaning agents. The slabs measure 110” x 49” and prices vary depending upon color and finish but have not yet been determined.
